JETRO

ABOUT YAMANAKA LACQUERWARE

Yamanaka lacquerware is made in the Yamanaka Onsen area of Kaga City, Ishikawa Prefecture.

Yamanaka has long been home to a large number of wood craftsmen and boasts the largest production of ground wood products.

Yamanaka lacquerware expresses natural texture by utilizing wood grain patterns.

The most distinctive feature of Yamanaka lacquerware is the vertical grain pattern that forms as the wood grows.

In addition to wood products, there are also modern lacquerware with urethane coating on a plastic resin base. Some of those lacquerware can be washed in a dishwasher.

The zelkova wood with little distortion is ground with a plane while leaving random lines. It is extremely robust because it is finished with lacquer from the base to the top coat. From small to large sizes, it fits compactly and the lid can also be used as a plate. Since it can be used, it is a full-fledged bowl that can be used to complete a basic meal with just this one bowl. The base coat is black lacquer, and the vermilion lacquer is layered on top of it. This technique is called "negoro-nuri" and is a unique technique that has been handed down from generation to generation.

Our company located in Yamanaka Onsen , Kaga City, Ishikawa Prefecture. As the name suggests, it is a hot spring town surrounded by mountains (yama = mountain). Its history is very old and it is said that it was discovered by Gyoki, a high priest of the Nara period, 1300 years ago. Then, a group of craftsmen migrated 400 years ago and lacquer ware making became popular. Our company makes lacquer ware and wooden tableware in such a historical place. (See more...)

There are several typical shapes in tea bowls for tea ceremony utensils. Their shapes and forms have been refined through tradition and innovation over a long history.

This product is a "well" among those wonderful shapes, finished with craftsmanship using natural wood.

Wooden bowls are light and hard to break, do not lose heat, and do not transfer heat to the hand.

The beautiful grain of the wood created by nature and the warmth and gentle touch that cannot be experienced with ceramics can be felt.

We process only natural wood produced in Japan. When dealing with natural materials, the most important thing is to have a good eye for wood. The first step in creating a good product is how to identify the best wood and bid for it at a reasonable price. We process good materials with high technology to produce high quality vessels. We make high quality vessels by processing good materials with high technology.
